"Chefs are environmentally conscious and are dedicated to the planet, employment and other people"

The next Chefs World Summit, from 25 to 27 November 2018, is an opportunity to attend conferences involving chefs, experts and producers on subjects they have chosen to discuss. The event, organised by Catherine Decuyper (Informa France), will take place under the patronage of HSH Prince Albert II of Monaco.

THE ERA OF ENVIRONMENTALLY CONSCIOUS CHEFS

This is the 3rd edition of this international congress where renowned chefs together discuss changes occurring within their profession and areas where immediate action is required.

Chefs and gastronomy professionals are involved on all fronts and wish to move forward together in respect of the areas in which they are engaged, creating a stronger and unified voice. This year, the CWS will be the setting of a real 'Forum' so that a written record of discussions can be produced to share and pass on. Under Philippe Joannes, the editorial team has put together a committed programme:

Chefs are environmentally conscious and are dedicated to the planet, employment and other people

Roundtables will be organised around key themes that concern the future, and will in particular cover:

- Eco-responsibility
- Training and recruitment, and
- Social initiatives.

After Régis Marcon in 2017, this year's sponsor is Mauro Colagreco who has invited Jorge Vallejo along with other chefs and experts from various countries to come and talk about these topics to which he is committed and to enrich discussions about participants' thoughts on these themes.
